Col. Thomas Sweeney and wile, who were poing to Cincinnati on a visit to relatives, were passengers on the boat.

Captain John Sweeney had the bull of the old Saline, the machinery of which was used in part on the Jessie W., loaded with 8,000 or 10,000 bushels of coal. This will not make it necessary to stop anywhere except for provisions and will leave a goodly number of bushels for sale, about 5,000 at the least, on the arrival of the boat at New Orleans. In addition, the boat, by the time she reaches Cincinnati, will have about 5,000 arrels of apples on board. After passing Cincinnati she will make no stops of any account.

The boat was built by Sweeney & Son, of this city, for a small cotton trade. She is neatly put up in every respect and the firm confidently looks forward to receiving orders for other boats on the strength of the impression she will make. Sweeney's boats have already acquired an envisible reputation on the Mississippi. The big, elegant T. P. OUR GREAT SLAUGHTER SALE

A PHENOMENAL HIT.

'Tis the Prices that Tell the Story!

This committee will make its report at a general meeting of the Association at the Arion hall next Monday evening. The plan now contemplated is to purchase from the city the lots on Slarket street just north of Washington hall, and erect thereon a four-story building, the third and fourth stories to be devoted to a hall proper, or assembly room, to be the largest in the city, and to be fitted up and supplied with all the modern appliances of such bails. The first floor will be devoted to store rooms, and the second to club rooms, committee rooms and offices. The general impression is that the project will be a go. The hall will be delicated to the memory of the early German pioneers of this section, and will be a fitting memorial to a class to which the city, state and country owes much, as well as a credit to Wheeling enterprise. Spend your money where you get the most for it. That is common sense and business too.

Whilst other Clothiers were "playing an engagement" to empty stores and sleepy clerks we were thronged with customers. From the immense lot of Fine All Wool Suits that we were slaughtering at about half value we sold nearly Five Hundred. Buyers came in droves from the workshop, from the counting-room, from the stores. No sooner did one buyer exhibit his purchase to his friend or fellow-worker, than he in turn came rushing to our Suit Department. The news traveled like wildfire that Gutman & Co. were selling Suits at half value, and the result was a continuous procession of men of all classes. At all times during the week our Suit salesmen have been "worked to death." Our assortment of these Suits is still complete. Come and get one. Don't miss this chance of a lifetime to get
